1. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

- (b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.
- 2. Claims 24-25, 35-36, 42, 44, 46, 53-54, 57-59 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Edrich et al.

Edrich et al discloses a device for providing magnetic stimulation to the body (horizontal coil 11) and what is considered to be "at least one conductor" (vertical coil 12) that reduces the stimulation near the surface that is induced by the magnetic stimulation device.

- 3. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:
 The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.
- 4. Claims 1-67 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being incomplete for omitting essential steps, such omission amounting to a gap between the steps. See MPEP § 2172.01. The omitted steps are: Claim 1 recites a method of reducing discomfort caused by transcutaneous stimulation however there is no recited step directed to reducing the discomfort. Also there is no positive recitation to a step of providing stimulation to two different locations, all that is recited is providing transcutaneous stimulation and then reducing the stimulation at a first location and maintaining the stimulation at a second location, however there is no step positively defining that the stimulation is provided at two locations.

With respect to claim 24 the claim recites a system for reducing discomfort in a patient comprising a magnetic stimulation device and at least one conductor. The claim attempts to claim the function of the conductor to reduce surface-proximate stimulation induced by the magnetic stimulation device, however the recitation does not use proper means plus function language in order to define the function of the conductor.

- 5. Applicant's arguments filed 12/16/05 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues that Edrich et al does not teach creating certain fields for the purpose of reducing discomfort in a patient. This appears to be directed to the intended use of the device, a recitation of the intended use of the claimed invention must result in a structural difference between the claimed invention and the prior art in order to patentably distinguish the claimed invention from the prior art. If the prior art structure is capable of performing the intended use, then it meets the claim. Edrich et al is clearly capable of performing the intended use, furthermore applicant states that "while Edrich admits reducing certain fields, it does so not for the purpose of reducing discomfort in a patient", thereby showing that Edrich does reduce certain fields just not for the same purpose but is clearly capable of performing the intended use.
- 6. Claims 1-23 would be allowable if rewritten or amended to overcome the rejection(s) under 35 U.S.C. 112, 2nd paragraph, set forth in this Office action.
